

Hi, my thoughts on the Covid response are:

1. The vaccines were still experimental, particularly the mRNA vaccines, and so no recipient of a vaccine inoculation could, prima facie, be said to be fully informed. Neither the long-term effects nor the full suite of side effects had been established.

2. The data in the national vaccine side-effect reporting system has not yet been fully researched. The data should be made available to analysts independent of the medical institutions. It is unlikely that all side-effects have been recorded due to lack of time or inclination of the medical practitioner.

3. AHPRA went beyond its remit by thinly veiled threats to medical practitioners if they discouraged patients from taking a Covid vaccine. AHPRA broke the nexus between doctor and patient. The patients were left on their own and had to make their own judgment about the efficacy of the experimental vaccines. AHPRA caused doctors to break the Hippocratic oath, 'First Do No Harm'.

4. The Medical Authorities were too quick to disavow tried and tested anti-viral treatments. It is noted that much later they quietly allowed Ivermectin to be prescribed. This 'vaccine only' ethos of the Medical Authorities gave the impression that they were in the pocket of Big Pharma.

5. State health departments were allowed too much free rein to impose their Vaccine Mandates. The Federal Government could have done more to proscribe principles to the States. It was dreadful that so many employees were subject to 'No Jab, No Job' dictates from their employers.

My wife and I took one dose of the [REDACTED] vaccine. My wife developed heart palpitations 3 hours later and had further heart palpitations 3 days later. I caught Covid 3 weeks after the [REDACTED] dose and 2 ½ weeks later developed a blood clot in my lower left calf. Was the clot caused by either Covid, the [REDACTED] dose, or both? Neither of us returned for the second dose.

Anecdotaly, there are many instances of vaccine injury. The [REDACTED] year old son of one [REDACTED] woman died after vaccination. Two brothers-in-law of my youngest brother had DVTs. An associate in a political party had neurological reactions.
