

I wish to comment as a citizen that I never conceived so many violations of fundamental human rights to be possible in a developed and progressive nation such as ours. Notably:

1. Freedom of movement (to enter and leave one's own country)
2. Right to informed consent in healthcare (mandatory vaccinations with insufficient trial data)
3. Freedom from discrimination - government and media endorsement of discrimination against the unvaccinated on no evidence of efficacy in controlling the spread (as evidenced by infection rates in NSW, despite approximately 95% vaccination rate) and licence given to private sector employers to discriminate on medical grounds (no jab, no job)

5. Freedom of speech - dissenting medical professionals silenced

6. Freedom of association - separation from family and friends during lockdowns.

As an employer in the international education sector, I witnessed depression, anxiety and inability to function in the workplace following the border closures and resultant job losses in the industry.

As a friend and colleague , I witnessed people suffering for months from the side effects of vaccinations they were coerced into.

As a daughter, I was unable to see or assist my aged parents abroad for two years.

The cost of the measures taken by the Australian government to control the spread of the virus is still being felt today socially, economically, physically and mentally.

It would make more sense to take steps to protect and support the vulnerable (elderly and immune compromised people) than to bring the entire healthy and productive population to a standstill for their protection - what is a life worth without a job and in isolation?

I would like to see a full investigation such as a Royal Commission into the human rights violations committed by our government and an assurance that these will never be repeated.

Thank you for reading.

Sincerely,
