

To whom it may concern,

I am deeply concerned about the handling of the COVID-19 pandemic and vaccination efforts in Australia, fearing a lack of impartiality in the ongoing inquiry. The potential misuse of privilege by those responsible for any mishandling demands urgent attention.

Human Rights Violations During the Pandemic:

Dignity and Equality (Article 1):

Leaders used psychological manipulation, vilifying citizens and fostering division among community groups.

Freedom Restrictions (Article 2):

Groups faced rights and freedom restrictions, including compulsory vaccinations for certain activities and interstate travel limitations.

Security and Bodily Autonomy (Article 3):

Australians lost security, including bodily autonomy, through forced vaccination and other restrictive measures.

Cruel Treatment (Article 5):

Harsh actions by authorities during protests and mandatory vaccination for some professions may be perceived as cruel.

Discrimination (Article 7):

Discrimination against the unvaccinated, perpetuated by media and government, resulted in job loss and violated human rights.

Right to Remedy (Article 8):

Advocating for a Royal Commission to provide an effective remedy for human rights violations.

Arbitrary Detention (Article 9):

Concerns about detention centers, lockdowns, and restrictions infringing on the right to freedom of movement.

Fair Trial (Article 10):

Urging a fair and public inquiry, as the current approach lacks independence and impartiality.

Privacy Invasion (Article 12):

Privacy concerns, including the use of QR codes and attacks on those expressing dissenting views online.

Freedom of Movement (Article 13):

Rights to interstate travel and leaving the country restricted based on vaccination status.

Seeking Asylum (Article 14):

Limited options for Australians seeking to leave the country due to COVID-related restrictions.

Freedom of Thought and Religion (Article 18):

Loss of freedom of thought and conscience, impacting religious beliefs and convictions against vaccine mandates.

Freedom of Expression (Article 19):

Government collaboration with social media platforms to silence dissenting voices, eroding freedom of expression.

Freedom of Assembly (Article 20):

Australians faced restrictions on peaceful assembly and association, with force used during protests.

Political Participation (Article 21):

The political system has ignored the will of the people, necessitating a higher body to address the crisis of trust.

Social Security (Article 22):

Australians felt exiled from society due to vaccine mandates, causing economic, social, and cultural harm.

Right to Work (Article 23):

Unvaccinated individuals faced discrimination and job loss, impacting the right to work.

Right to Rest and Leisure (Article 24):

Restrictions on outdoor activities during lockdowns and financial aftermath affecting leisure.

Standard of Living (Article 25):

Economic and job-related repercussions impacting the standard of living for many Australians.

Right to Education (Article 26):

Forced vaccination mandates impacting education, limiting options for parents and students.

Cultural Participation (Article 27):

Exclusion of unvaccinated individuals from cultural activities and suppression of scientific dissent.

Social Order (Article 28):

Call for a Royal Commission to restore lost rights and freedoms, ensuring a just social and international order.

Duties to the Community (Article 29):

Loss of rights without legal justification, undermining the principles of democracy.

Declaration Preservation (Article 30):

Emphasizing the need to rectify human rights violations and restore the fundamental principles outlined in the Declaration.

In conclusion, the Australian public demands accountability and transparency through a Royal Commission to address the erosion of fundamental human rights during the COVID-19 crisis. Australians deserve a fair, impartial, and independent investigation to restore trust and protect the rights and freedoms of the entire population.
