

As an employee of the [REDACTED] having given ample warning to my employer that I did not want to have the risky mRNA type vaccine but was happy to have conventional covid vaccine (eg Novovax), I was basically informed that it was mandatory and a condition of employment ie effectively blackmailed to be vaxed against my will which I understand is contrary to the Aust Immunisation Authority's own charter. This is reprehensible. Worse still a fellow staff member, having acquired myocarditis likely from the vaccine had specialist cardiac advice against a further booster but even they were told to have the vaccine or employment will be terminated. This mindset was prevalent throughout the department and there needs policies in place to prevent this total loss of perspective and callous disregard for their employees health ever happening again. Whatever the cost to the public purse, vaccination or for that matter any medical intervention should never be forced upon employees or the public against their stated will. Dress it up how you like but this was blackmail and totally unacceptable, indeed totally un Australian.
