

Please see part of my Covid19 experience below:

My name is [REDACTED] I am a Registered Nurse who is still unable to return to nursing due to the mandates. I have multiple serology results to prove I have natural immunity against SARS-CoV-2 (confirmed by my doctor). I chose not to participate in the global vaccination roll-out. The vaccine roll-out is contrary to my training. The current restrictions placed upon me are unreasonable and illogical. I am not a threat to anyone in a healthcare setting or in the wider community. The state of Victoria needs nurses, however discriminatory policies continue.

Another issue that needs to be addressed is the serology testing. I have phoned to ask pathology what variant I suffered. Strangely, they can never tell me. They have confirmed that the serology test cannot define between variants. How do health and government officials distinguish between variants when labs can't? I find this very strange.

I'd also like to raise the treatment I have received from doctors. I have requested a written exemption so I can return to work, but so far have been refused. The doctors are afraid of potential negative repercussions from government and regulators. They have told me this themselves and I have recorded evidence of this. Their responses seem very script-like.
