

To the COVID-19 Response Inquiry Panel,

Your Inquiry, limited as it is by the terms of reference, entirely lacks public legitimacy. It is insulting to the Australian public.

You must understand that these issues entirely transcend politics. Every year that goes by without an account of what Australian governments did to their peoples is a year where fundamental division is reinforced, anger multiplies and mistrust turns into hatred. These lead to consequences that are not political in nature if the political system cannot address them with public legitimacy.

I request a Royal Commission to replace this inquiry. The Commission must impartially examine:

- State Governments' response to the pandemic

- Federal Government's response to the pandemic

It must examine issues such as:

- Decisions to impose lockdowns based on modelling data

- The public health basis and effects of mandates

- Whether the public health messaging was truthful or just intended to manipulate behaviour

- Whether treatment procurements, approvals or bans were corrupt or conducted without appropriate public scrutiny

- Whether Australian governments and agencies censored doctors or members of the public

- The nature of Australia's subsequent excess mortality

- The state of the doctor-patient relationship and the mass violation of medical consent, with particular attention paid to those who suffered economic and social persecution at the hands of government decision-makers and the experience of those who were injured by injections they were pressured to take

- Whether Australia's pandemic response overall has inflicted permanent damage to the rule of law, the validity of our institutions including especially our health systems, the Australian economy, and the well-being of our youngest generation.

Although I am requesting a Royal Commission to replace this inquiry, know that I don't believe any Australian government will have the courage to address these issues. I expect you will dismiss this submission. The social contract has been so thoroughly desecrated that as far as I am concerned, we don't have a country anymore – we have a blind, vicious, malevolent machine preying upon the people living in this land.

A Royal Commission is the minimum initiative you need to show that you have any respect for public transparency, the rule of law and the separation of powers. It will not be enough to restore public trust, however. You will need to admit wrongdoing, and there will be widespread prosecutions and a [REDACTED] This is the best possible outcome you can hope for.

Good luck with your gaslighting.
