

I am an immunocompromised mother to a pre-term baby and worry terribly that our government will again put the economy ahead of people's lives. There is no money in the world that is worth killing innocent people for.

Government responses to pandemics need to be made with the most vulnerable to illness in mind. Letting a virus run rampant, as the government is now doing forces those like us to live in perpetual home quarantine. We can't even go to doctors or hospitals without being exposed as mask mandates are no longer in effect.

Everyone should wear a mask and the government needs to ensure every public place has adequate hepa filters so that vulnerable people can at least leave their homes to get necessities and medical care.

I'm ashamed to be a part of a country where people have decided they are willing to sacrifice other Australian's for their own gain.
