

To Whom it may concern

Re: COVID-19 pandemic response inquiry

I am writing to express my deep concerns about several aspects of the government's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. While I acknowledge the challenges faced, there are critical issues that demand attention.

Firstly, the allocation of $8 billion to Big Pharma for gene-vaccines without proper testing is disconcerting, especially when considering the potential conflict of interest involving [REDACTED] chair of CEPI, reviewing the procurement deal. Transparency and unbiased scrutiny in such matters are paramount to uphold public trust.

Moreover, the mRNA vaccines' insufficient testing and lack of peer-reviewed data raise questions about their safety and efficacy. It is essential that public health decisions are grounded in thorough and transparent scientific processes.

The imposition of lockdowns, though intended to curb the virus, has raised concerns about their impact on human rights and personal autonomy. The long-term consequences, particularly on mental health, especially for children deprived of social interactions and schooling, warrant a comprehensive evaluation of the measures' effectiveness and necessity.

Mandating vaccines without conclusive evidence of their effectiveness raises moral and ethical concerns. Citizens deserve clarity and assurance regarding the safety and efficacy of mandated vaccines.

Furthermore, the government's actions, coupled with misinformation, have strained relationships among families and communities. A lack of transparency and accountability has contributed to widespread distrust in the government's handling of the pandemic.

It is crucial for the government to acknowledge and address the public's concerns, as its role is to serve the citizens, not overreach into their lives. The apparent relationship with pharmaceutical companies Pfizer and Moderna should be scrutinized to ensure ethical standards are maintained.

I urge you to consider these concerns seriously, fostering a transparent dialogue with the public to rebuild trust and ensure that decisions affecting citizens' lives are based on rigorous evidence and ethical principles going forward.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
